

MORRIS GIRARD COOKE

Here are three great patriots—all Philadelphians. Robert Morris financed his country in 1776—Stephen Girard risked his fortune for the young nation in 1812—Jay Cooke turned his money and financial genius over to his country in 1861.

These men loaned their all that our country might live.

Americans, a far greater crisis is upon us now—our lives, our homes, our liberty, are once more in danger. Again, money is the sinew that will stand the strain and give us victory and peace for all time.

Philadelphians, in this war this district needs not one but one million patriots to lend their money that the German war-machine may be smashed beyond rebuilding.
